

Ben Moses W6FY Emmy winning writer, TV/Movie producer, whose formal education began in engineering and took him into the creative arts and music. Born Benjamin Moses and raised in a farm town in Southern Illinois passed the Novice test while he was age 9, but the official license didn't arrive from the FCC until after he turned 10, which made him miss being the only 9 year old ham in the country by a month. Frustrating!

As KN9CNC, Ben worked 40 and 80 Meters in the Novice bands with two crystals and a couple dipoles. By his teens the first international Geophysical Year (57-58) coincided with the highest sunspot numbers in memory to open up the world to our Midwestern kid, so he ignored homework for a couple years, choosing to run traffic and phone patches for stations such as KC4AAA and KC4USA in the Antarctic. What a rush!

Ben studied engineering and working as an engineer and cameraman at a St. Louis TV station. His career has taken him to the CBS Network in NYC and ABC Los Angeles..places he'd never have dreamed of working had it not been for the skills learned through ham radio.

His other calls include W2GGV in NYC during the late 60s and 70s.

Ben says "For a kid from a small Midwestern town, amateur radio truly opened his ears – and mind – to the world.

Our subject currently has a book "Talk To Your Body" Confessions of a Hypochondriac. Former credits co-producing for "Good Morning, Vietnam" - Without A Clue - Nickel & Dime in 1992 and Hope Ranch in 2001. He has studied the religions of the world and for over 40 years has participated in and observed healing services conducted in many walks of life. Partially scripted from qrz.com
